Why is it studied?	Students new to high school history require an introduction to the key skills concepts in history at Hagley. This will allow them encounters with the richness of the past and the complexity of historical enquiry. We aim to start year 7 pupils on their journey in making sense of their own experiences and the world around them by engaging with the past. The Romans topic gives the pupils a chance to explore the origin of the Roman Empire outside of Britain and how it spread around the globe. They will study the significance it had in shaping the culture of Britain after the Roman invasion. This allows the pupils to see how many British institutions, ideals and traditions were shaped by Roman influence. The pupil's assessment focus is the significance of Roman ideas in changing Britain and assessing the impact of their invasion of Britain. This allows pupils to utilise the skills of chronology, cause and consequence and using sources assessed earlier in the year to help them analyse the significance of the Roman	The Normans give the pupils a grounding in the earlier parts of British history and show the impact that foreign invasion has on the people of Britain in terms of their society and culture. This also allows access to the key skills of cause and consequence, chronology and using historical sources which will be revisited throughout their teaching of history at Hagley. It is important that students understand the impact of the Norman conquest and how religion has shaped British society. By focusing on the control of the Catholic church and the impact of events of huge global significance such as the Black Death we develop the chronological understanding of the pupils focussing on the Middle Ages and the increasing threat of revolt. This allows the students a deeper understanding of the changes to Britain in the Middle Ages and further develops the skills of cause and consequence, significance and interpretation	Pupils focus on the social upheaval of life after the Black Death and how revolt and rebellion were a very real threat for the monarchy. Their chronological knowledge of the topic is further supported by overview project looking at the life of people in the Middle Ages occupation. These skills will be revisited and built on further in year 8.	of key individuals in the time period.

Year 8

	Autumn	Spring	Summer
Unit/Topics	The Tudors (Monarchy)	<ul> <li>The Stuart (Monarchy)</li> <li>Cromwell and the Republic</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>The Native Americans.</li> </ul>
Key Assessment	<ul> <li>Henry VII assessment         (Using Evidence)</li> <li>Dissolution of the         Monasteries Assessment         (Cause and             Consequence)</li> <li>Spanish Armada             assessment         (Significance,             Communicating about             the past)</li> <li>Tudor Life Magazine             assessment         (Communicating about             the past)</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Gunpowder plot assessment (Communicating about the past)</li> <li>Cromwell assessment (Interpretation)</li> <li>1500-1700 Overview task (Change and Continuity)</li> </ul>	A Guide to native     American Life     (Communicating     about the past)
Why is it studied?	Students build on the concepts of power, monarchy and the impact of religion studied in year 7 by developing their understanding of the significant change created by the leaders of our nation, and how monarchy shaped our society. By focusing on the Tudors this builds on common topics in KS2 in more depth, allowing the students a deeper understanding of the changes to British institutions such as Parliamentary democracy and introduction of Empire. The students develop their use of key concepts of cause and consequence and using evidence to communicate about the Tudor period in their assessed tasks.	Students focus on shaping their chronological understanding of the period by studying the Stuarts and the key events that lead to Britain becoming a republic. We revisit the concept of revolt and protest and how this leads to Civil War. This allows pupils to understand the birth of parliamentary democracy in Britain and why we have a Parliament today and ties in with British values. We build on concepts of chronology, cause and consequence and significance. Pupils also revisit the skills of Interpretation looking at Cromwell and historical opinions of role as Lord protector.	In the summer term the pupils get the opportunity to conduct a world study, focussing on an area of history outside Britain. We look at the culture, society and lives of native American tribes. This allows us the opportunity to study historical sources and evidence and use chronology to assess the impact of Native American society. This culminates in a project communicating their knowledge of these native American tribes and their lives and customs. These skills will be revisited and built on in year 9.

Key Assessment	<ul> <li>Slavery assessment         (Interpretation, Using         Evidence)</li> <li>Kidderminster Case         study (Change and         continuity)</li> <li>Jack the Ripper         assessment (Using         Evidence)</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Titanic Inquiry report         (Using Evidence)</li> <li>WW1 Trench         Assessment (Using         Evidence)</li> <li>Treaty of Versailles         Assessment         (Communicating about         the past)</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Hitler assessment         (Cause)</li> <li>Hitler assessment         (Consequence)</li> <li>Persecution of the         Jews Assessment         (Consequence)</li> <li>Dunkirk assessment         (Chronology,         Communicating         about the past)</li> </ul>
Why is it studied?	We begin year 9 by linking back to the concepts of Empire studied in year 8. We link the Tudor concept of Empire to the beginning of the Slave Trade by European powers and its impact on world trade. This then links both chronologically and conceptually to the industrial revolution and the impact of this on Britain's trade links as well as the negative consequences on Britain's population in terms of health and living conditions. It is important that the students understand the link to our own local region, given that Hagley is on the border of the original industrial region, as highlighted by our local study of the impact of the Industrial revolution on Kidderminster. Britain at the heart of the Empire is also examined in the Jack the Ripper topic looking at the media frenzy caused by the world's first serial killer. This gives us the opportunity to revisit and develop using evidence/interpretation as well as improving chronological understanding and the concepts of cause and consequence, change and continuity.	Titanic allows us to develop the skills of interpretation further by looking in depth at which people were responsible for the disaster. This also develops pupils understanding of industrial era in a different way and allows the students to see how social structures that developed from the Industrial Revolution were reflected in the microcosm of the disaster and helps to link to the changing perception of British industrial and imperial domination of the world. This links to the notion of Empire looking at how alliances and militarism led to the First World War and follows chronologically, but also thematically, from the Industry and Empire topics, as it was the first fully industrial war. We focus on different aspects of the experiences of soldiers, as well as the key historical concepts of causation and using sources/evidence. This allows the students to gain a more indepth understanding of a conflict that some observers feel is becoming a "forgotten war", but one which links directly to the wider citizenship issue of remembrance and memorialisation. This also links directly to the topic of medicine on the Western front studied at GCSE.	The summer term allows us to follow on chronologically looking at the period between the wars and the political vacuum left in Germany following the abdication of the Kaiser. period. This allows the pupils to revisit concepts of political representation and different ways of running a country and directly links to topics we cover at GCSE. We also look at the impact and significance of WW2 globally. The pupils further develop their use of key concepts of cause, consequence, and chronological understanding. As a natural follow on fromWW2, it is essential that the students understand the causes and impacts of the Holocaust, as one of the most significant events in human history, linking clearly to the wider themes of British values such as tolerance.

Why is it studied?	The KS3 key skills studied in History have prepared the students for those key concepts assessed during the GCSE examinations. By KS4 our pupils are experience in the key concepts and skills needed to be a successful historian at GCSE. The modules chosen by the department reflect those concepts which the students have experience of in KS3. The medicine topic begins in the Middle Ages, which the pupils have experience of in KS3 where they looked at Medieval medicine. It also links back to the Romans also studied in year 7. The concepts of change and continuity have been revisited throughout KS3. These skills plus chronological understanding are vital for success in the exam and revisited throughout KS4. These skills are also the basis of the skills required at A 'level showing progression on our 'learning journey' for 7 years. # Why is it studied?

By KS4 our pupils are experience in the key concepts and skills needed to be a successful historian at GCSE. The modules chosen by the department reflect and build upon the concepts and skills which the students have experience of in KS3 such as war, power, monarchy and ordinary people. All students have studied Elizabeth I briefly in KS3. They have experience of the key concepts of religion, empire and war. The key skills of change and continuity, cause and consequence and significance have been revisited throughout KS3 as have the source analysis and interpretation skill needed for the exam. These skills plus chronological understanding are vital for success in the exam and revisited throughout KS4. These skills are also the basis of the skills required at A 'level showing progression on our 'learning journey' for 7 years.

Year 12/13 (3 topics over 2 years)

Why is it	The A' Level topics were chosen to compliment the skills and specialisms of the History department. At A'
studied?	Level all students are experienced in the key history skills needed to succeed in the subject. We simply adapt and hone these skills to fit into the specification of the exams. These skills include essay writing skills, source analysis and thematic study depth study of. Students are offered topics that allo gain knowledge of a variety of time periods as well as key concepts in British and European hi which still impact on the world around them. It is our aim that by studying the past and these concepts we can help the students become the informed, well-rounded adults that society needs. The module of the topic-based essay allows the students to develop skills required at higher education such as essay writing, independent research, and referencing. This is the culmination of a 7-year rich encounter with the past.
